SHOW ANALYSIS

SPINEXPO New York was held at the Metropolitan Pavilion & Altman Building on the 19th, 20th and 21st of July 2010 and was attended by a number of visitors similar to that of the previous year: 1,522 visitors as opposed to the 1,534 of the previous year.

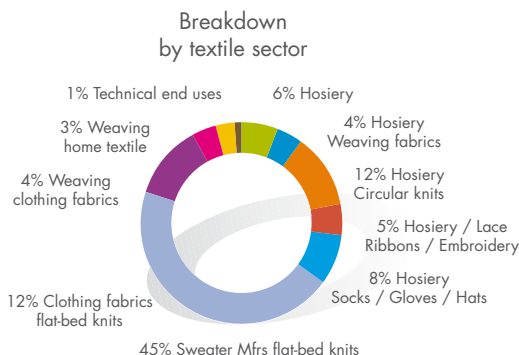

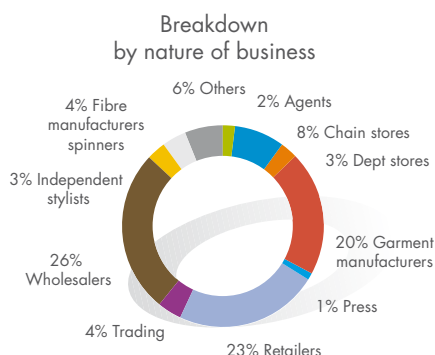

The visitors were characterized by a greater number of companies, each company having a markedly smaller number of representatives; the majority of these were decision-makers, most of whom had travelled to attend meetings arranged in advance: SPINEXPO New York is therefore very different from SPINEXPO Shanghai, with business relations being arranged in advance, be it with the New York brands or those of the rest of the United States. A growing number of visitors are coming from the United States and Central and Latin America, whereas fewer visitors are coming from Europe or Asia (Asian visitors visiting the former session being mostly production and QC teams working in Asian countries).

Contrary to the general atmosphere of the previous year, in which buyers demanded specific products, being dependent upon an economy in crisis which was holding them back, the session which has just come to a close showed us indecisive buyers confronted with a depressed market and a season ending with a negative balance, with store-based products having sold very badly, even when on sale. The price of raw materials (except polyester) is an additional factor which further encourages the wait-and-see attitude of buyers and it was this climate that dominated the general atmosphere of the show, where trade on the stands has been unpredictable due to hesitant customers not confident in their choices.

RESULTS OF THE 2ND SESSION

It is to be expected that decisions will be made – once again – at the last minute, putting pressure on the textile mills, which will have to manufacture late orders with delivery deadlines which will be difficult to meet.

The calibre of the companies that visited the show, however, is not to blame; the collections offered were well received, but the situation is complex in the face of a market which had fixed its maximum price objective at a time when the price of raw materials is commanding higher purchase prices.

We are looking into the possibility of a two-day show for the next session, to be held on a Tuesday and Wednesday, with longer opening hours (9.00am – 6.30pm).

The next session will be held at the Metropolitan Pavilion & Altman Bldg on the 19th and 20th July 2011.
