We continue our journey through the trends presented at SPINEXPO™ with MIXMATCHING - Ultimate dichotomy

This presentation area is divided into two parts, one reflecting the other.

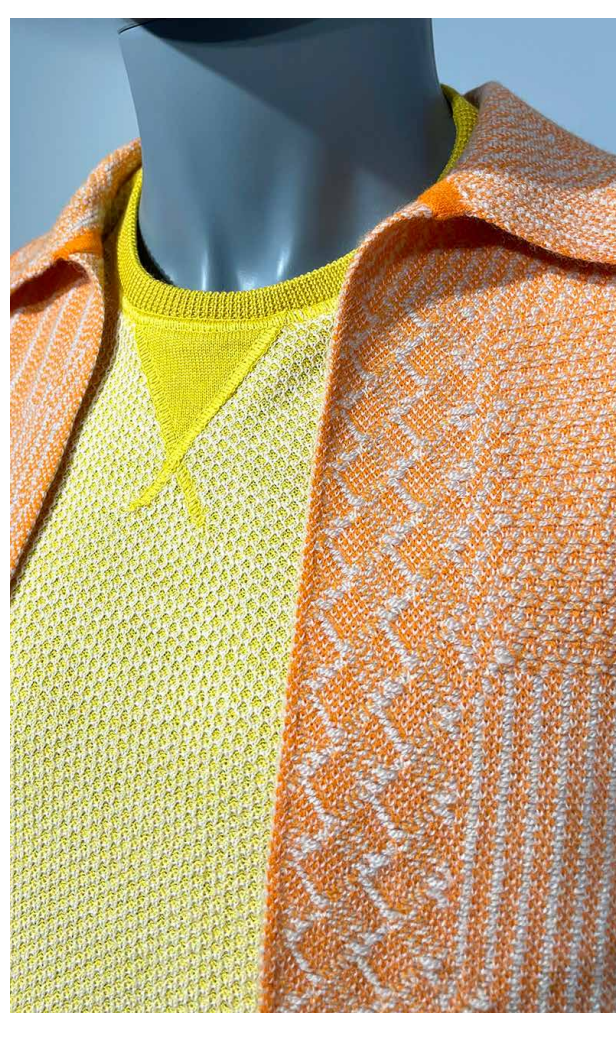

Flat knitting meets circular knitting, demonstrating two technological aspects of the same direction.

FLAT KNITTING - PART 1

Unconventional materials and trims, leather or wood are incorporated into garments as accessories or parts of garments.

An optimistic vision of the future in which the most diverse applications coexist in multicoloured ranges. Diversity, heterogeneity and plurality are the key words that celebrate rediscovered freedom, the idea of escaping all control, of mixing reality and technology in a melting pot of the virtual and the real.

The focus is on the sustainability and circularity of textiles. By exploring performance textiles, we are investigating the functionality of fibres for outdoor sports: thermal regulation, moisture control, odour management, waterproofing and breathability.

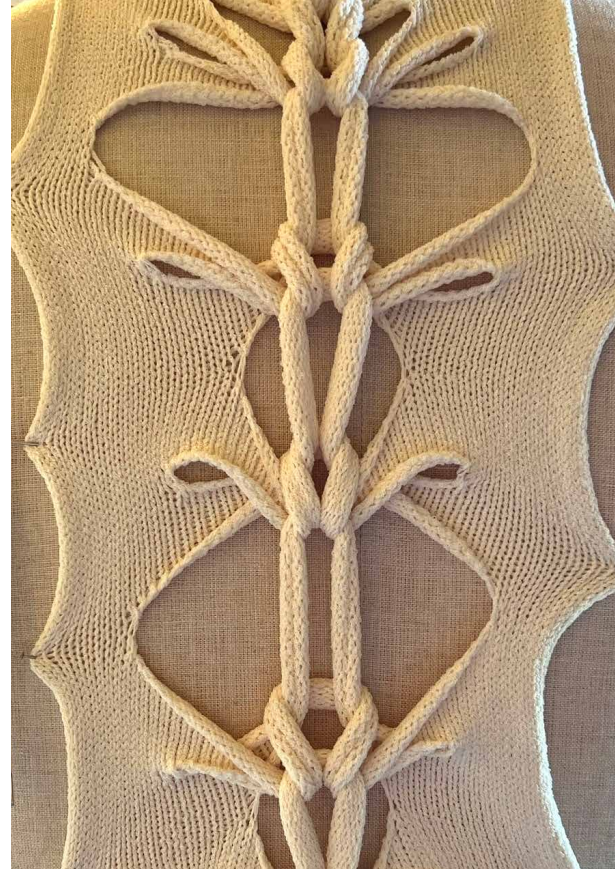

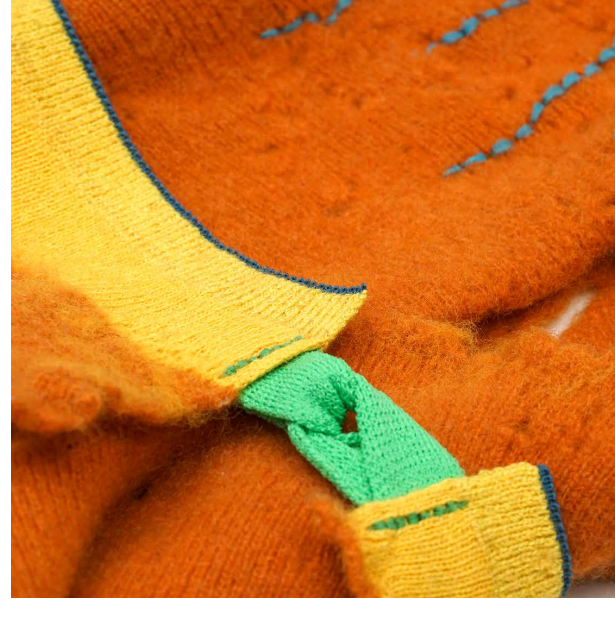

A focus on trims as a means of linking single-component materials within a product for ease of disassembly and recyclability.

Fabrics can be layered, joined together and easily disassembled.

Repair is important to extend the life of this special product.

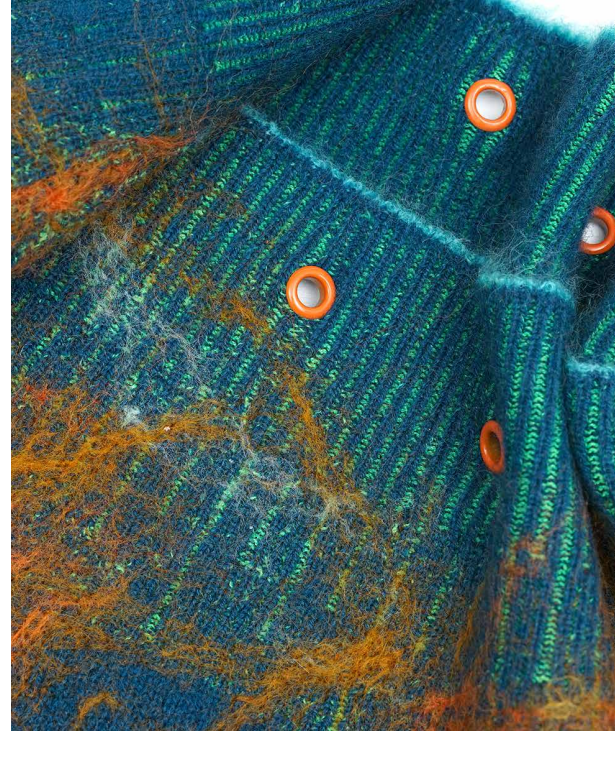

A trend inspired by outdoor sports, climbing, skiing and hiking, and by the functional aspects of workwear.

A need for protection, shrinkage and volume for a modified Scandinavian style that is rustic and down-to-earth, assembling separate garments as if they had been picked up in different places and layered.

Beyond the stripes, watercolours and artistic drawings, we are inspired by the memory of water, the increased dematerialisation of air density, space technology, with a reference to extraterrestrial forms, as if we were looking beyond the Earth, into the mysteries of the universe.

Lighter materials, the integration of lightweight fibres into textiles, multiple substrates including polyester, cotton and nylon for graphic sportswear.
